

Semiotics as Strategy

Graeme CM Smith

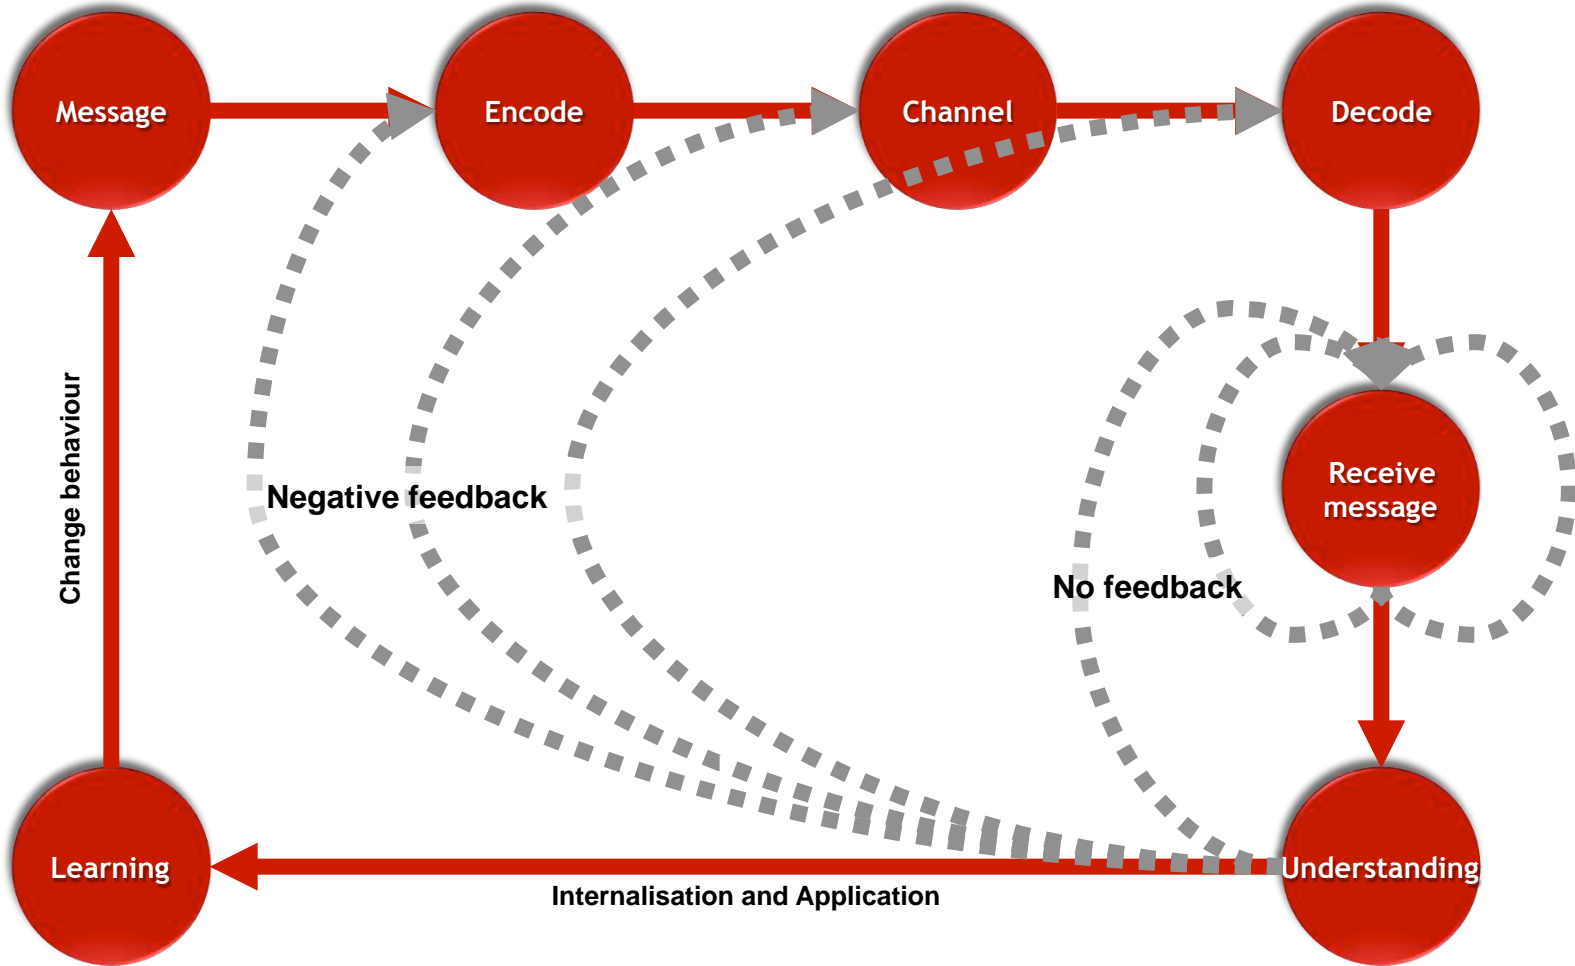

gcmsmith@live.co.uk

graeme.smith@solent.co.uk

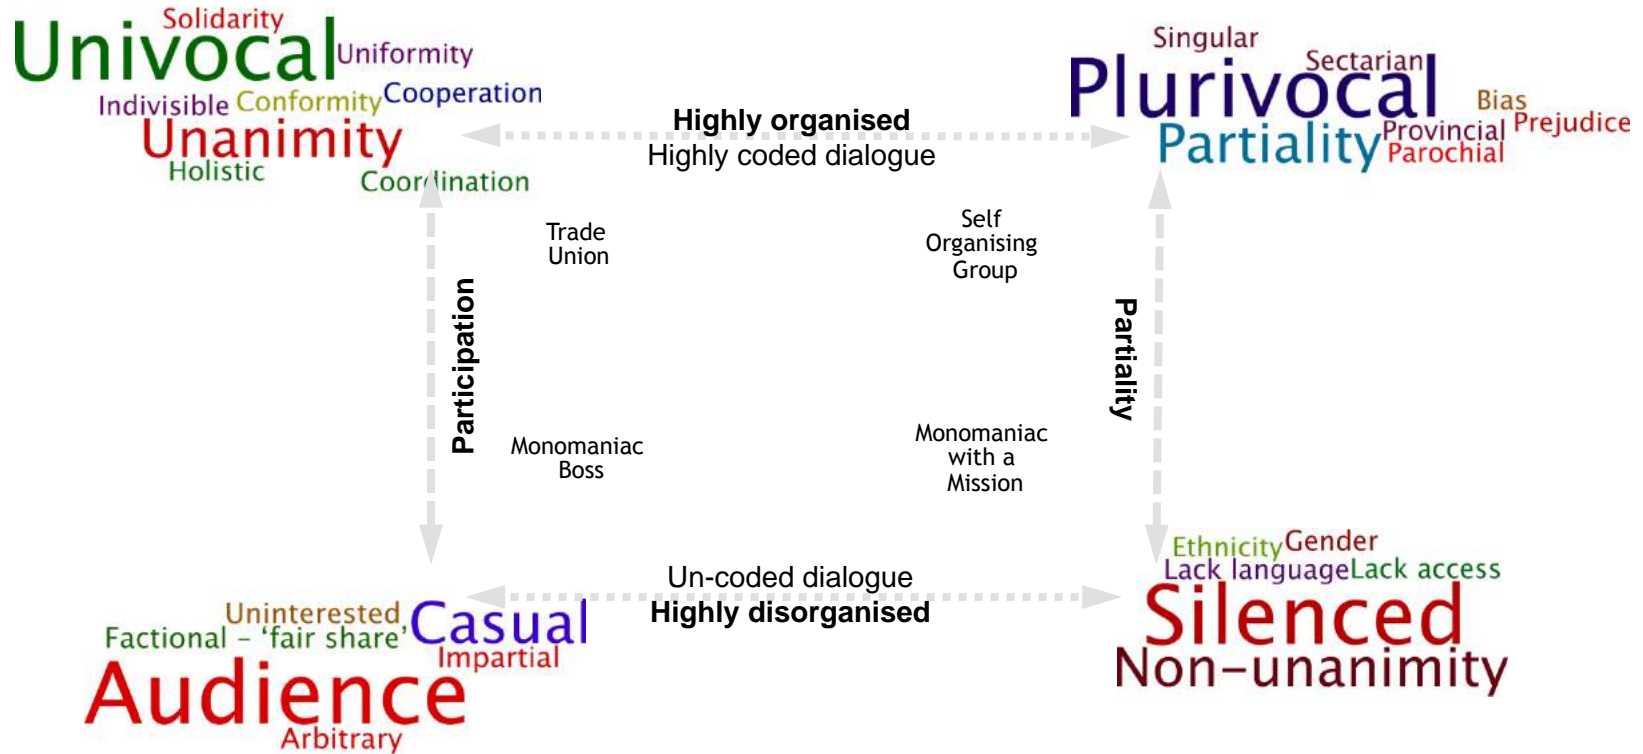

Semiotics as Strategy by Graeme CM Smith is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivs 3.0 Unported License.

Managing the message

Smith and Blackman - Bled, Slovenia; Nov 2001

Semiotics of Strategy Conversation

Case Study - Large IT (CRM) Project

- Lack of attention to codes
- Strategy conversation implicit rather than explicit state
- Large number of actors 'taking a position
- This plurivocal paradigm quickly morphed into new
- This new story became the new univocal voice
- As a consequence cynicism and doubting was on a totemic scale

Case study signs

SCHRÖDINGER'S CAT IS A DEAD AVIARY

Case Study - Process re-engineering

- This failure immediately led to a new strategy discourse
- New semiotics were developed by staff to codify processes
- New signifier's helped staff to signify better their activities
- Allowing staff to develop new codes and conventions helped to maintain a univocal voice
- Symbols were more believable

Case study signs

Case Study - Balanced Scorecard

- Univocal paradigm to moderate a stramash of plurivocal voices
- New signs and a new narrative to facilitate participation
- Introduce a more holistic franchise
- Conversation was deconstructed and a new one formed
- Deconstruction opened the door to the plurivocal
- New univocal voice began to coalesce
- Caucus grew as understanding of new signs gained a growing convention of syntax

Case study signs

Google

Sainsbury's

LEHMAN BROTHERS

